what do you think of this:

Jenna,

Knowing that partnership will be key once a plan is presented and approved by the Board, district staff have met proactively with municipal partners, prior to the beginning of planning. My understanding is that these were high-level and not specific to the plans being actively developed now.

Similarly, our team did meet with the Museum of Boulder, at their request at the end of June, to hear their interest in space. Again, no specific plans were discussed.

I understand this is sensitive, which is why we wanted to give you another chance to respond with any detail that might make the reporting more accurate beyond what we already know to help the public understand any background that may be important.

Regarding the initial question, you are now confirming there has been dialogue with the museum about the use of space later this year but not specific buildings, is that correct? Is future use planning factoring into the consolidation plan?

I'll let my editor know you'd like to connect.

Thanks,
Jenna

She wanted to know if the Museum had been offered space in a particular school by BVSD staff. We confirmed that, not only have we not had discussions with you or anyone about specific schools, we don't even have an agreement with BVSD about whether a space-sharing arrangement is possible.

We emphasized that the Museum has had discussions over the past two years with several government entities about space sharing for the Museum's collection, including the City of Boulder, the Boulder Library District, Boulder County, and BVSD. We said that, in addition to alleviating space constraints that the Museum has, a possible space-sharing collaboration with an organization that has an educational mission--like the library or BVSD--would be particularly attractive to the Museum as a way to share historical artifacts and photographs in our collection with a wider segment of the community.
Chris and I wanted you to be aware of this inquiry.
Best,
Bob

Just wanting to get your final comment since I know in fact a meeting between Rob and Bob Yates has taken place to discuss using a school for storage. I was told Whittier was the ideal match, but there was a list presented to select from.

And related to that, what is the district's thinking around how the possible future use of school buildings plays into the final decision making?

Thanks,
Jenna

No. No conversations.

I'm curious on who your source is - since that has no basis in fact.

I would suspect that you'll hear more rumors before August 25 - when we present a proposed plan to the Board of Education.

Ok thanks. So There haven't been any conversations at all with community partners about the possible use of school buildings? I've heard Whittier and Southern Hills have both been discussed in that vein.

Jenna,

Thanks for reaching out.

Any consideration regarding the future use of a closed facility is a separate process that would occur only after the Board makes its decision this fall.

We have, of course, been in communication with municipalities and community partners to keep them informed about the ongoing process. However, discussions about the future of any specific facility have not begun at this stage.

At this point, it is simply too early for those conversations.

Randy

Hi Randy - I wanted to see what the district might share about its conversations around possible agreements forming to take over closed schools.
For instance, does the district have any plans or dialogue around partnering with institutions such as CU or the Museum of Boulder to take over BVSD buildings, and if so do those possibilities add weight to the scale toward closure?

Thanks,
Jenna
