Good evening,
I'm saddened that we are not together for the day before Winter Vacation - singing together and sending us all into the holidays with warmth. Alas, many things are outside of our control.
Logistically - please don't force an effort to come to school tomorrow if there are power outages that put traffic lights on 4-way stops or have downed trees and damaged power lines. The building should be accessible but the community area might not be.
Holiday-sicly - I wish you all a lovely vacation with warmth and joy.
Work-wise - please do one last email check, put your vacation responder on, and don't work on these closure days. You work so diligently and tirelessly, and these closure days are a reprieve. I do not expect anyone to email me or families unless there's an urgent situation. In that event, PLEASE text or call me [redacted] so we can consult on how important this is to manage now.
Family-wise - I'll send a message to families tomorrow with information about school access (school is closed, can't come to school).
All my best to you all. I will likely have another message via email to you before vacation, but this hasty message to you is the start.
Jon
